Religious beliefs and allegations aside, as a former student of Mr. Carney's, he made a very significant impact on me during that time, which I believe highly spoke of his character. While in high school, I won a national championship title for a non-school sport. So the school had no idea about it. It was my proudest achievement in life, honestly. Mr. Carney found out about it and recognized my achievement during a class one day. It wasn't much, but it was huge for me. I never wanted the spotlight, but it was just something I cared about so much, it was so nice for a few minutes to be able to have my hard work and dedication recognized and acknowledged by my peers. It was just little moment in time that mattered to me. I also loved horses and Mr. Carney had some free tickets to a horse-related event that he asked if I would be interested in since he wasn't going, I gladly accepted and this was just another kind gesture from a man who could've been like any other teacher and not gone this extra mile to make someone's day. These were such significant memories in life, that I will always respect and appreciate Mr. Carney for having that impact on my life. I know he's religious and I respect that, I also know that I personally never once felt like he pushed his religion upon on anyone during my class, but he was a trusted adult you could go to if you were religious and wanted to talk about it. He made a personal difference in my life.

As a side note, one of my friends in high school, their dad passed away during high school. Mr. Carney was the only teacher who showed up for a few minutes to pay his respects and check on the well-being of my friend and his family and offer support during that difficult time. Another example of a kind and supportive gesture that made an impact and lasting memory of him for me. He never had any expectation to go to an unexpected funeral for a student's parent. But he did. I think that says a lot. But everyone is entitled to their own thoughts and opinions.

These are allegations, not proven, as stated in the letter. I know Mike and he is a man of integrity. He is a great teacher, and will make a great addition to the Hilliard City Council.
